

Relocate with a solid financial foundation.

Expatriate Banking in the United States

When your career takes you to a new country, getting your financial accounts set up quickly and seamlessly can help ease the transition. For example, when relocating to the United States you will need a domestic bank account and access to credit. Once those are established, you can receive your salary and relocation allowances, place a deposit on an apartment, secure utilities, pay bills and more.

However, establishing a new banking relationship without a U.S. Social Security number, credit history or permanent address can be quite difficult. At City National®, we understand these unique financial challenges and can help make settling into a new home easier.

Banking With City National

As a client, you'll receive a personal, concierge-style banking experience. Our dedicated U.S.-based team has more than 20 years of experience serving global companies, relocation professionals and relocating employees.

- Before arriving in the U.S., you can open accounts securely and remotely from the comfort of your home or office.
- City National offers multiple bank account options based on your unique needs and situation.
- After completing an application, you may open an account within 24-48 hours to quickly access relocation funds and accelerate the settling-in process.

Obtaining a Credit Card or Mortgage¹

You can apply for a City National Bank personal credit card or residential mortgage loan without the need for a U.S. Social Security number, credit history or permanent address. We can also help relocating employees navigate the home buying process, including getting preapproved for a residential mortgage loan.

Moving Funds From Home?

City National Bank offers foreign currency deposit accounts that can hold up to 22 different currencies. In addition, you can make transactions in more than 100 different currencies by phone, online or via the City National Bank App™.⁴
